VALUE OF PEDIGREE.

“The knowledge that one is descended from a line of ancestors who have ascended to their God eminent for their intelligence, integrity, and piety, can but lead a person to respect himself, and to determine not to dishonor in his own life the unspotted succession to which he belongs of men great in their goodness. I care not for distinctions founded upon wealth, office, or title.”

CHAPTER I.

HEGIRA OF THE DISSENTERS.

That was a tough period in Oliver Cromwell's time ! The chronicler recites that the great reformer came to the active front without much ado or apparent predestination. " From the date of his birth on a farm in Huntingdonshire to his first election to Parliament, in his 30th year, his life was almost uneventful, barring his marriage at the Church of St. Giles, on Aug. 22, 1620, which the parish register attests. For a moment, it is true, his voice was heard in the historic drama of those distracting times. Still there could be no prevision of the part he was to play. In a few months thereafter the King dismissed the people's representatives, and Cromwell went back to rural obscurity. Next we find him resolved to flee from the tyranny which he was destined, later, to crush." So the record runs. " The court party was bringing every engine of political and religious persecution to bear upon those who dared oppose it. The jails were full, the stocks in constant use. Yeoman and gentry were making their way to Holland, and thence to America, in search of liberty of life and conscience, fleeing from crass ritualism. On the morning of the 1st of May, 1637, there occurred one of those little incidents that pass almost unnoticed and unrecorded at the time, but prove afterward to have been the turning points of history. Eight emigrant ships lay in the Thames, ready to sail. On shore was a gathering of pilgrims who had said farewell to their native land and taken passage for a freer one beyond the sea. Oliver Cromwell was one of them ; his famous cousin, John Hampden, was another. But as they came down to the wharf that morning their way was barred by soldiers. They might not sail. The king had issued a "royal ordinance," forbidding his subjects to leave England. Resistance was useless. Cromwell stayed, and with him, as Macaulay says, stayed the evil genius of the House of Stuart."

This is the legend as currently stated, though not universally accepted, as a true statement of facts. The pros and cons are fully set forth in various published references by French and English annalists.¹ For these I am indebted to the intelligent researches and indefatigable perseverance of Mr. T. W. Osborn, of the University club, New York, and his nephew, Thomas C. Horton. The latter states that the lists which he found in the Historical Collections were very recently discovered by a clergyman in England among some ancient records which were about to be destroyed. So he caused them to be sent to the Massachusetts Historical Society. But for this fortuitous event, the res gestae of this crucial period would have been without authentic proof. Quoting from "England Under the Stuarts," London, 1882, Vol. II, p. 251 :

"The fact is well known that Cromwell was once on the point of quitting England forever. To the non-conformist, the enemy of control, and the discontented of all classes, America at this period offered a vast field of unrestraint, and no indifferent means of subsistence. Many Puritans, and others, had already flocked there, and it was undoubtedly the policy of Charles to encourage such migration. The story is well known that at one time the government detained eight ships in the river, on board of which were Sir Arthur Hazelrig, Rich, Hampden, Pym, and Oliver Cromwell."

Although the truth of this story has been discussed there can be no doubt of Cromwell having at least on one occasion contemplated quitting England, for the recital goes on to say that "in 1641, when the grand remonstrance of the Commons against the general grievances of the nation was carried at 3 o'clock in the morning by a majority of only nine," we find Cromwell, on the House breaking up, confiding to Falkland what had previously been his intentions. "If that remonstrance had not passed," he said, "he would have sold all he had the next morning and never have seen England more"; and he added that "he knew many other honest men of the same resolution." (Cromwelliana, p. 2.)

Furthermore, from Lord Nugent's "Memorials of John Hampden, his Party and Times," p. 116, we have it that

"The spirit of emigration spread daily among the Puritans. The views of the greater number of that party were entirely directed to that object; thus leaving their leaders without any further duties to fulfill in England. But even this refuge from a persecution which appeared irresistible, and from which there remained no other means of escape, was refused them.¹

"This project, which would have relieved the government from the embarrassment of their presence, and of all their further plans, was defeated by an order of the King in council, dated April 6, 1638, by which all masters and owners of ships were restrained from setting forth any vessel with passengers for America without special license.²

"The immediate effect of this monstrous edict is rendered remarkable by an event which has thrown over the whole a strange air of fatality. Eight ships, with respectable emigrants on board, were at this time lying in the Thames, bound for the new colony. In one of these had actually embarked for their voyage across the Atlantic, two no less considerable persons than John Hampden³ and his kinsman, Oliver Cromwell, the latter then little distinguished, except for an opposition which he conducted with great spirit and ability in his native county of Huntingdon, against the project of the Bedford Level, a work which, like all the other great schemes of improvement, had been converted into a monopoly which was to give new means of influence to the Crown. But the Court was unwilling that its opponents should anywhere enjoy or communicate the systems of freedom which they taught, or should peacefully withdraw themselves, even at the hazard of the total confiscation of their estates at home, from a control of whose success they despaired and from a country which they deemed to be hopelessly enslaved.

"A special order was therefore issued that these vessels by name should be detained, and the provisions landed which had been shipped for the voyage.⁴

² Bancroft [Richard Bancroft, D. D., Archbishop of Canterbury, born 1544, died 1610], in his early persecution of the Puritans, under James, seeing that great numbers of them were emigrating to Virginia, obtained a proclamation enjoining them not to depart without the King's license.

³ Hampden had purchased lands in Virginia through an agent five years previously, and was going out to prove them.—C. Hallock.

⁴ Neale's History of the Puritans.—Rushworth.—Dugdale's Troubles.

"Thus, in the alternative between flight and resistance, the government, as it were, bound down these eminent men to an opposite condition to that which they had chosen for themselves. Pride, character and obligation to party and to principle pledged them, so long as they should inhabit the country of their birth, to pursue the course they had begun. Hampden and Cromwell remained; to act, probably with very different views, certainly in very different circumstances; the one to be the first mover of resistance in arms to the King: the other to finally defeat and ruin the power in the field, to overthrow the monarchy, and to bring the Sovereign, by whom he was now so arbitrarily detained, to a public scaffold.¹

Quoting from Dr. W. A. Hallock's booklet, "The Hallock Ancestry," published 1866, by Am. Tract Society :

"In 1634 . . . at Yarmouth, England, Rev. John Youngs and Joan, his wife, of St. Margarets, Suffolk, were forbidden passage to New England. [History Puritans, Mass. Hist. Coll., Vol. iv, p. 101.] Mr. Youngs was soon after settled at Hingham, in Norfolk county, adjoining Suffolk, 100 miles northeast of London, and six years later, on Oct. 21, 1640, in the New World he gathered his church anew under the auspices of Rev. John Davenport², minister, and Theophilus Eaton, governor of the New Haven colony, which had just been planted, April 18, 1638, under a branching oak [holy-oak], a virtual theocracy, the Bible their code of laws, ecclesiastical and civil." [Trumbull's Hist. of Conn.]

"In the same autumn Rev. Mr. Youngs and his church took up their abode in Southold, then comprising the whole northeastern branch of Long Island, landing at the harbor of what is now Southold village, on the Peconic Bay, where as a church or town they retained their connection with the New Haven colony till 1662, and with Connecticut twelve years longer, till 1674. Rev. Mr. Youngs here continued his ministry thirty-two years, and died Feb. 24, 1672, aged 74, as by

"Mr. Hume avers that Hampden and the rest were for going to New England for the privilege of hearing sermons seven hours long."

his tombstone. The twelve men, with members of their families, who constituted his church were Wm. Wells, Barnabas Horton, and John Conklin (whose graves are near that of their pastor), Peter Hallock, John Tuthill, Richard Terry, Thomas Mapes, Matthias Corwin, Robert Akerly Jacob Corey, Isaac Arnold, and John Budd, the first white settlers in that part of the island.

"Peter Hallock's great great granddaughter, Elizabeth Hallock, born 1732, who died at Old Aquebogue, Feb. 12, 1831, aged 98, wife of Silas Corwin, gave to her granddaughters, Mrs. James Hallock, now of Quogue, and Mrs. Rev. James T. Hamlin of Mattituck, Mr. Jonathan G. Horton, and others now living, the following facts, which are confirmed by multiplied records and memorials: That Peter Hallock was the first of the thirteen who adventured to step on shore among the Indians at Southold, that part of the village being still called "Hallock's Neck," and the beach extending from it, "Hallock's Beach," of which beach Mr. Horton (who lives in the first frame house erected at Southold by his ancestor, Barnabas Horton) is one of the joint owners; that Peter Hallock purchased from the Indians the tract since called Oyster Ponds, now Orient, the eastern end of this branch of the island (see Thompson's History of Long Island); that he then returned to England for his wife, who when he married her was a widow and had a son by her former husband, Mr. Howell; that he promised her that, if she now accompanied him, her son should share with his in his property; that on coming back he found the Indians had resold what is now Orient; that he then purchased about ten miles west of Southold village a farm extending from Long Island Sound on the north to Peconic bay on the south (three miles), on which he settled in Aquebogue, about two miles west of Mattituck village and creek.

"His original homestead on Long Island and that of his wife's son, Howell, were on adjacent lots, and are still occupied (1866) by their respective descendants, Benjamin Laurens Hallock and Sylvester Howell. On the south part of the purchase are the farms of Col. Micah W. and Dea. Ezra Hallock, great grandsons of Zerubabel Hallock, who was a great grandson of Peter. Numerous other families of Hallocks, most of them prosperous farmers, reside on or near this purchase by Peter Hallock, but of the burial place of either himself or his only son William, or his grandsons Thomas and Peter, who inherited the same premises, they have no knowledge. John Hallock, 1st and 2d, in Setauket, doubtless lie buried in a small Quaker ground adjoining the main graveyard, their names distinguished only by "J. H." on small stones scarcely rising above the surface. In the Mattituck graveyard rest the bodies of Zerubabel Hallock and many of his descendants, and of Gen. H. W. Halleck's great-great, and great-grandfathers Peter Jr. and Major Peter.

"Of many unexpected coincidences confirming facts in the ancestry, a singular one corroborates the evidence that Joshua Hallock of Moriches was the son of William, whose will was proved 1736. Mr. William Hallock, aged 80, living near Moriches, says his grandfather, Zebulon, and this Joshua were brothers, and relates that their father, William of Southold, (unhappily) had possession of two very smart colored men, Jack and Brister; that he gave Jack to his son Zebulon, and Brister to his son Joshua in Moriches, with striking anecdotes of Brister's energy and kindness well known in Moriches. This Joshua moved to Orange county, N. Y., near Chester church, of which his son Jonathan was a founder and an officer. In the records of that church were found Lewis Hallock and two female Hallocks, "colored," doubtless the children of this same Brister.

"The marriage of William Hallock, of Stony Brook, to Sarah Saxton, of Huntington, was truly romantic. A young man of uncommon strength and beauty, he had been assisting Mr. Saxton in the labors of the farm for some months, when the parents were alarmed at apparent partialities between him and their daughter, which they in all proper ways discouraged. At length on a bright morning the young people were missing, as were also two horses and saddles. Mr. Saxton followed them with speed across the New York ferries, and to friends in New Jersey, and reached them just after the marriage contract had been solemnized. "I see I'm too late," said he; "now come home, and we will all welcome you." The connection was a happy one. They were the parents of twelve children, some of them highly accomplished and moving in the first circles of society, with a numerous and highly esteemed posterity.

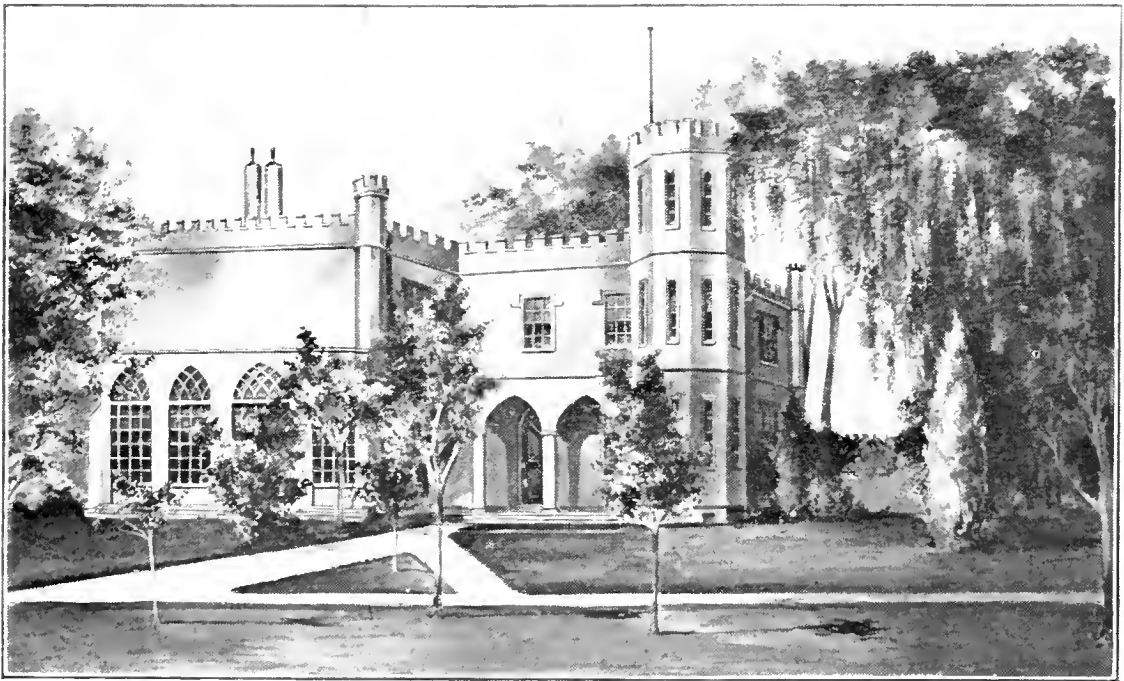

"William Hallock, who died Sept. 28, 1684, son of Peter Hallock, made a will, which is preserved in the ancient records both of Suffolk county at Riverhead and of New York city. It is dated, "Southold (township), February 10, 1682," and was proved Oct. 21, 1684: "I commit my soul into the hands of Jesus Christ my gracious Redeemer, and my body to the earth by decent burial, in assured hope of the resurrection at the last day." He gives his property to his wife Margaret, his four sons, Thomas, Peter, William, and John, and his five daughters, Margaret, Martha, Sarah, Elizabeth, and Abigail. "The land where I now dwell at Aquebogue (near Mattituck) and the lane dividing it, he wills to Thomas and Peter, giving Thomas the western half, 'except the swamp lot,' near his house; and giving Peter the eastern half, with the swamp lot and his dwelling. To his son William he gives lands in or near Southold village, and to his son John land in Wading river." The will implies deep sorrow that his son John had married into and joined the then prescribed Society of Friends¹, and has the proviso that if any one of his sons "shall apostatize from the Protestant doctrine and faith," or "wilfully and of set purpose contemn and neglect the public worship of God suitable thereto," what is here willed to him shall pass over to "the next lawful heir that shall steadfastly profess and own the said doctrine and faith."

"The Documentary History of the State of New York, in a list of those taxed in the township of Southold in 1675, gives but two of the name of Hallock, William, taxed £361, and John, doubtless William's eldest son, £82; and in 1683 three of the name of Hallock, William £236, John £80, and Thomas £81. Richard Howell, who lived on the lot adjoining the original homestead of Peter Hallock, being taxed in 1675, £77; in 1683, £98. In the same history a list of the total inhabitants of Southold township in 1698, including men, women, and children, in all 881, gives 254 persons bearing the names of twelve of the above thirteen original settlers. Among these are twenty-three of the name of Hallock, viz.: Margaret Hallock, widow; and in three distinct groups the families of three of William's sons: 1. Thomas Hallock, with Hope, Thomas, Kingsland, Ichabod, Zerubabel, born

1696, Anna, Patience, and Richard; 2. Peter Hallock, with Eliza, Bethiah, Abigail, Peter Jr., William, and Noah, born 1696; 3. William Hallock, with Mary, William Jr., Prudence, and Zebulon. John Hallock, William's other son, having removed to Brookhaven, all the Hallocks in Southold township in 1698 were the above twenty-three, the widow and descendants of the William Hallock who died in 1684. In the records of several of the earlier wills the signature is Halliock, and it has been conjectured that the name was originally identified with Holyoke [Dr. W. A. Hallock, "Hallock Ancestry," 1866.] The following facts as to the family and earlier descendants of each of these four sons of William Hallock have been chiefly obtained from the reliable source of wills and deeds preserved in certified records. Having visited the principal localities, ancient residences and graves, and carefully weighed the evidence in every case, I regard the main statements as unquestionably reliable. It is to be regretted that this brief sketch could not include the female, perhaps the larger half of the Hallock generations.—Rev. Wm. A. Hallock, D. D., son of Rev. Moses Hallock, born 1794, in "Hallock Ancestry."

CHAPTER II.

HALLOCK-HOLYOKE.

“The facts of the landing of Peter Hallock (sic) at Southold, L. I., in 1640, and the location and history of the thirteen first settlers, are given with great care and accuracy by Rev. Ephraim Whittaker, successor to Rev. John Youngs in the church at Southold, in a sermon preached two hundred years after their landing. The place where they buried their winter’s provisions, and the cellar of the parsonage built for Mr. Youngs, are still to be seen, as is this early pastor’s cherished grave. Hallock’s Neck and Beach in that vicinity are as familiar as household words.”—Hallock Ancestry, 1866.

It is a curious fact that this most circumstantial and apparently incontrovertible story should now be discredited, after it has stood for more than two centuries and a half, by historians who once labored to establish its authenticity. It is even asserted that there was no Peter Hallock; and, indeed, his name cannot be found on the passenger lists of colonists migrating to America in 1632-8, as given in the Mass. Hist. Collections. Whittaker himself, whose “History of Southold” is in the Long Island Historical Society’s library, says in a note to the author of these lines:

“I repeated to your uncle, who compiled the Hallock Ancestry, the story which I had heard respecting Peter Hallock, and which is published in ‘Griffen’s Journal.’ . . . I now know that the story is untrue. There is not a particle of evidence to be found that Peter Hallock was ever here.”

But who was? Who was the historical man? Who was the father of William, whose record is admitted to be “clear and accurate,” as attested by his res gestae and will of 1682? That will is signed William Hallock, but the copyist, whose rescript is of record, has inadvertently subscribed it Holyoake, a noticeable departure from the original Holyoke. Recognizing these discrepancies in the spelling, which are conspicuous on gravestones and legal documents along the family line for the preceding forty years, the logical conclusion would be that well authenticated facts of long standing, and always accepted as historical data, have simply been overlaid by a mirage resulting from a distortion and interchange of family patronymics. Reasons for such modifications are given elsewhere in the text. If the name Hallock was not on the passenger lists of colonists shipping for America, it would hardly appear among the persons set on shore. The question then arises, if Hallock is not a diatonic of Holyoke, whence and how did it originate? It is not common in England to-day, and is not of record at Yarmouth or Hingham, whence Rev. Youngs and his company migrated. The name Holyoke has been known in England for centuries, and there is a family coat of arms. One Edward Holyoke migrated from Stafford county in 1639, and was afterwards President of Harvard College. His son, Elizur Holyoke, became well known in Northwestern Massachusetts in 1654 from having received a grant of land near Northampton; and Mt. Holyoke is named for him because he camped at its base while land looking. The family arms appear in his will (1711). He had a son, Edward Augustus, who lived to be nearly 100 years old.

Now, the signature to the application for the grant is spelled Elezer Holliok, while in the body of the application it is Halliock ; and again in a report published the next year (Nov. 1, 1654), it is spelled Elizer Holyoke. Further, the signature of the Will of William Hallock of Long Island, dated at Southold (township) Feb. 10, 1682, and proved Oct. 21, 1684, and on record at Riverhead, is written Hollyoake by the copyist. In several earlier Wills the signatures are Halliozk. The name Halliock appears on early tombstones in various graveyards of eastern Long Island, but recent generations have substituted Hallock, Halleck, Hallick, and Hallack. The reason assigned and current on the Island is that the clansmen thought it sounded better. Halleck was first so written by Dea. Jabez Halleck (born 1760, and died 1863, at Westernville, Oneida county, N. Y., aged 103 years. He wrote a running hand, and did not round his letters, and so his o got flattened into e.)

Evidently the name was spelled by the sound. Few persons wrote or could write. The best scholars and authors spelled awkwardly. Orthography was in process of evolution. Chirography in business transaction was left to the clergy, scriveners, and clerks by principals, who took down phonetically the names as dictated. Pronunciation of proper names was not always clear or intelligible. It varied with individuals. Dialects were different according to districts and geographical location. Some individuals chopped their words, and some drawled. The name Holyoke seems to have become almost obsolete in American city directories and cyclopedias of biography. Quite recently, in 1888, one of the family living in England came over to America in quest of kinsfolk, and found few of the name, if any. He afterwards published a volume of impressions entitled, "Among the Americans," in which he makes such declaration.

One of my references speaks of the Holyokes of Capawn Castle, Shropshire, Shiffnel, England, who were iron masters, or something of the kind. George Jacobs Holyoke, one of their descendants of considerable note, died at Brighton, Jan. 23, 1906, in his 89th year. [It was his son, George Jacob Jr., who wrote the book.] He was born in Birmingham, 1817. The London Daily News says he came of very humble origin as a buttou manufacturer, but afterwards became an author of distinction and a prominent social, political, and religious agitator. Nevertheless, he "was fortunate in his friendships, was honored and respected by Gladstone and the other liberal leaders. He enjoyed the confidence of foreign democrats like Kossuth, Mazzini, and Garibaldi. He wrote "History of Co-operation in England," a work in two volumes, which Mr. Bright said was the only original argument in favor of the movement he had seen. He also edited thirty volumes of "The Reasoner." He quarreled with Bradlaugh and abetted John Burns. He was the originator of the term "jingo" in 1878. His "Reminiscences," it says, "are full of the most benevolent judgments upon men and opinions."

In this connection it is interesting to note that the first recorded burial in the old Springfield (Mass.) cemetery, in 1641, and the oldest monument, was in memory of Mrs. Mary Holyoke, daughter of William Pynchon, the founder of the colony, who was born in England, and died and was buried there. His associates, Captain Eleazer [so spelled] Holyoke, husband of Mary; Deacon Chapin, a magistrate with Pynchon and Holyoke; Henry Burt, who was associated with them in the affairs of church and state; Rev. Peletiah Glover, the second minister of the town, who died in 1692, and Major Pynchon, the ministers and magistrates and all classes of people for 200 years, were buried in this churchyard.

These facts were restated in the Springfield Republican a few years ago, when the new city cemetery was opened.

For two generations after the emigration in 1630-40, the name of Holyoke persisted as spelled; thence onward continued variations took place. Just now, it is quite as difficult for inquirers to find Hallocks in England as Holyokes in America, or even in colonial times, or in the remote past.

1. THOMAS HALLOCK'S DESCENDANTS.

No will or deed of Thomas Hallock, grandson of Peter of 1640, has been found, nor any record of his sons Kingsland and Richard, named as above in the census of 1698. Ichabod, son of Thomas, wills 1759 to his son Thomas, born Jan. 6, 1766, who married Hannah ———, born Feb. 3, 1768, on Dec. 28, 1788, and had thirteen children, as follows: Elizabeth, born May 25, 1789; Thomas, born Aug. 1, 1790; Hannah, born May 23, 1792; Nancy, born Oct. 24, 1793; Mary, born July 5, 1795; Sarah, born Jan. 31, 1797; Noah, born Oct. 4, 1798; Margaret, born April 30, 1799; Katherine, born Aug. 1, 1801; Peter, born Nov. 13, 1803; Daniel Miner, born Oct. 9, 1807; Nathaniel, born April 17, 1809; Conkline, born June 15, 1813. [From old Bible, dated 1806, in possession of F. E. Hallock, 735 Lexington Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.] Thomas 3d of New Providence, N. J., who died 1822, aged about 60, was father of Smith Hallock, who was father of Jeremiah R. Hallock of Newark, N. J.

Zerubabel Hallock, son of Thomas, who has a large posterity near the original homestead, died April 8, 1761, aged 65, and his wife Esther, 1773, aged 78, as by their gravestones in Mattituck. He wills, 1761, lands to his sons Zerubabel 2d, James, Joseph; £400 to Benjamin, student, who died 1765, aged 24; £100 to grandson William (then aged 11), to be paid him at 21, and £10 to grandson Zechariah. Zerubabel's sons, John aged 20, and William, aged 24, were drowned 1749, William's son William being born 1750, after his father's death, and having no brother. These facts are confirmed by Mrs. Esther Hallock Reeve, now 85, daughter of Zechariah.

1. Zerubabel 2d, died March 31, 1800, aged 78, had seven sons: Zerubabel 3d, Richard, Zechariah, John, Daniel, Caleb, Ezra. HALLOCK'S NECK.

Southold, L. I.

Of Gen. Halleck, the late Justice Stephen J. Field of the U. S. Supreme Court wrote to the author in March, 1884, as follows: "Our relations were quite intimate and very friendly for many years. He rendered very important service to California when he was secretary to Gen. Riley, who was military governor before it was admitted into the Union. It was probably owing to him more than to any other person that the convention of '49 was called, which gave us the constitution of a free State." Noah Hallock, Peter's brother, had sons Noah, William, and Josiah, born 1732, died 1815, who had sons Josiah, father of George, James, Amos, and Jonathan, born 1766, died 1847, the father of Jesse and Samuel, born 1792, died 1836, who was the father of Sylvester, born 1816, died 1904. born March 28, 1898. Rev. Leavitt married for second wife Ellen M. Webster of Portland, Me., Oct. 3, 1888. They have no issue.

GERARD HALLOCK, born Mar. 18, 1800, was editor of the New York "Journal of Commerce" for 34 years. At one time, before the war, he was active in the Southern Aid Society, with Dr. Robert Baird and Rev. Joseph C. Stiles, under whose auspices and furtherance the slaves of the South would have been manumitted without war or bloodshed, as summarily and peacefully as were the slaves of Brazil, in twenty years' time. It was Mr. Hallock's efforts to prevent forceful action that brought him to the inquisition of the anti-slavery politicians, who persisted in provoking a conflict, and thereby shortened his life. He died Jan. 4, 1866. On June 2, 1825, he married Eliza Allen, born Sept. 30, 1800, daughter of Ezra Allen of Martha's Vineyard. She died April 1, 1873. Had sons William Homes, Charles, Leavitt, and Gerard, and daughters Eliza, Caroline Mayhew Butler, and Mary Cordelia.

9. William H., born Aug. 26, 1826, married Julia Mack, daughter of Col. John Mack of Plainfield, Mass., Sept. 3, 1851, and died June 24, 1894: she five months later. Eliza, born June 24, 1828, died Feb. 21, 1893, married Ezekiel Porter Belden of Wethersfield, Conn., born April 24, 1823, and had son James, who died in infancy, and Mary E., born Jan. 14, 1853. Belden was editor of the New York "Shoe and Leather Reporter" in the 70's.

Charles, born March 13, 1834, married Amelia J. Wardell of New York, daughter of Oliver T. Wardell (whose ancestors settled Newark, N. J.), and Julia Pratzner, whose father was a colonel in the Prussian army. He founded the town of Hallock in Minnesota in 1879-80, and with Fayette S. Giles the Blooming Grove Park Game Preserve in Pike county, Pa., in 1870. In 1883 he made the first successful culture of sunflowers for the oil product. From 1852 to 1874 he was connected with the New York "Journal of Commerce," but is best known as the founder of "Forest and Stream," and also the author of many books of travel, sport, and natural science. His wife died April 8, 1901. They had sons Charles Jr., born Sept. 1, 1856, died Feb. 22, 1869; Livingston, and Edmund Lee. Leavitt, brother of Charles, born July 20, 1836, died Dec. 5, 1839. Caroline and Gerard Jr. died young. Mary C., born Aug. 17, 1843, married Moses Porter Snell of North Brookfield, Mass., born May 3, 1839, while he was an officer in the army in August, 1862. He afterward became an ordained clergyman, and also has served 30 years since the war in the U. S. Postoffice Dept. at Washington. [He was the grandson of Dr. Thomas Snell (uncle of William Cullen Bryant and father of Prof. Ebenezer Strong Snell, the first graduate of Amherst College), who was co-founder of Amherst College by his wife, the granddaughter of Rev. Jonathan Edwards. Dr. Snell is also descended from John and Priscilla Alden, Rev. Solomon Stoddard, Hooker, the founder of the Hartford colony, and Pierpont, second head of the New Haven colony, and is as nearly related as any living person to Aaron Burr. His family is a branch of the Snells of Wilton, Wiltshire, England, landed gentry; and the first American head of the family, Thomas Snell, came over in 1658, and was the owner of a large part of the present township of East Bridgewater, Mass.]—Copied from "Mind" for March, 1904, p. 240.

The Porter graft into the Hallock family is traced to Samuel Porter, who located in Hadley, Mass., in 1659, and had son Samuel Jr., whose son Eleazer, 1697, was the first child born in the place, who had son Eleazer, 1728, who was the father of Col. Moses Porter, born in 1768, for whom Mary C. Hallock's husband was named. The Porters came to Hadley from Wethersfield, Conn., whence E. Porter Belden got his name.

The aforesaid Moses Porter Snell and wife had seven sons and two daughters, namely: Merwin Porter, born Aug. 2, 1863, a noted topical writer, orientalist, linguist, and at one time president of college in Wichita, Kansas, who married, Dec. 24, 1892, Minnie A. Sprague, (a widow with two sons), daughter of Col. and Rev. E. W. Andrews, who was first pastor of Tabernacle (Cong.) church in New York city, and

Joseph W. Baggs of Newfoundland, born May 1, 1820, died March 23, 1852, and mother of Fred A. Baggs, now of New York, and his sister, A. Josephine Baggs, who lives at Crisfield, Md., with her mother (now Mrs. Mary Ann Cochrane by a second husband) and her widowed son, Robert Cochrane, and his daughter Edna Arletta, born Jan. 5, 1894. In 1838 Homan Hallock obtained a patent from Oliver Ellsworth for a time lock and a pantagraph, and while he was in Syria he invented the Arabic type, in coöperation with Rev. Eli Smith; made several fonts of the same for the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. He printed the first Arabic Bible. He was very active in his last years mentally and physically, and at 86 was not only chopping down an orchard of sixty old apple trees, but published in the New York Evening Post a consecutive series of aphorisms or sage sayings under the caption of "The Wisdom of Bar-Homan, an Eastern Patriarch who writes at the age of 86, and is likely to live to be 100." An untimely fall cut off this expectation. He was "sticking type" in his shop near his daughter's residence in Cummington, Mass., until past 90. He had sons Moses, born April 28, 1829, died Sept. 12, 1878; Homan Benjamin, born June 24, 1830, at Malta, Mediterranean, died Oct. 19, 1895; Gerard Jewett, born 1832, died Aug. —, 1894; Margaret Esther, born Dec. 22, 1834; Samuel, born March 3, 1836; Sarah, born Dec. 22, 1838; and William Allen, born Aug. 24, 1843. IV. JOHN HALLOCK'S DESCENDANTS.

The Westbury Monthly Meeting of Friends records the death of John Hallock, grandson of Peter of 1640, and that of his wife, Abigail Swazey, at Setauket, in Brookhaven, in 1737, "both very ancient and in unity with Friends." She died Jan. 23, 1737. Deeds at Riverhead name four of his sons, John 2d, Peter, Benjamin, and William, who all settled near him in Setauket, as did also his son Jonathan, whose children and William's are known to have been cousins. A deed in 1715 from William to his son William is now held by their descendant, Edmund P. Hallock. The neat dwelling of John Hallock 1st, covered with cedar, and that of John 2d still remains (1863) in Setauket.

I. John Hallock 2d, Friends' preacher, by his will 1765, aged 86, had three sons, John 3d, Edward, and Samuel, and daughters Abigail Powell, Sarah Hunt, and Hannah Saterly.

1. John 3d, North Castle, Westchester county, N. Y., died 1757, aged 47, wills to sons John, David, James, and Samuel; and daughters Phoebe Underhill and Catherine Powell. He had ten daughters, who married into the families of Powell, Underhill, Willets, Willis, and Hunt.

John 4th of Somers had sons John and Robert.

John 5th, Friends' preacher, who died 1850, invented "the cold water process" of making castor oil, and went west from New York State and bought land near Mt. Carmel, Illinois, to introduce raising the bean and making the oil. He married Malinda Parmenter of Mt. Carmel, daughter of Col. Isaac Parmenter and Sarah Utter Parmenter, who served in the war of 1812, the Mexican war, and the Black Hawk war. John Hallock's daughter Sarah, born April 17, 1768, married James Crane, born Oct. 14, 1763, died at Richmond, Vt., Aug. 17, 1828, whose second wife was Clarinda, the sister of his first wife, born Aug. 12, 1781, married June 22, 1808, died at Fort Atkinson, Wis., Jan. 20, 1859. CHAPTER III.

INHERITED LONGEVITY.

The Hallock family is noted for longevity. Subjoined is a list of 64 persons of record for two centuries whose ages average $87\frac{1}{2}$ years. They are chiefly males, and probably comprise about two-fifths of the entire aggregate. A great many others are still living whose ages approximate 80 years, and quite a few between that figure and 100. It will be perceived that seventeen of those enumerated were 90 years old and upward, and three over 100, which see :

FOUNDERS' MONUMENT,
Southold, L. I.

CHAPTER IV.

HALLOCK REVOLUTIONARY RECORD

From "New York in the Revolution," [see library of Congress], the names of Majors Peter, John, Richard, and Zachariah Hallock, are found in the regiment commanded by Col. Jacob Smith: 1st Regiment Minute Men, Suffolk Co., N. Y., Militia.

Jonathan Hallick, soldier in Col. Lewis DuBois' 5th Regt. of the Line.

[Nathan Hallock of Southold, L. I., died 1756, aged 28. Monument inscription, Southold.]

Joseph, son of Major Peter, fell as commander of an armed vessel in the war of the Revolution by the last shot before the attacking force surrendered.

William, born 1730, served in coast defence, and was in command of picket boats near New London, on Long Island Sound. He and Zephaniah Platt of Plattsburg, N. Y., married sisters. William died in 1782. His son William was five years in the Revolutionary army, and for one year a prisoner in the old sugar house in Rose street, New York.

William Hallock, born Southampton, L. I., 1730, died Goshen, Mass., Oct. 21, 1815, at the age of 85, was in the army of the Revolution with his sons Moses and Jeremiah. They enlisted in 1779, and served in New Jersey, Moses one term and Jeremiah two terms.¹ At the battle of Ticonderoga their father was a comrade of Capt. T. P. Lyman's grandfather, who captured a Queen Anne musket from a Hessian. The weapon bears the Tower mark, and is now in the possession of ——— Packard, son-in-law of Widow Lyman, at Goshen.

¹ They enlisted only for three months at first, as we did in the civil war, because they thought it would be short.

Col. Micah W. Hallock, great-grandson of Zerubabel Hallock, was in the war of 1812.

Joshua, son of Dea. Jonathan of Monroe, N. Y., was in the war of 1812. His grandson, Capt. John Hallock, was in the Federal army.

Gen. Henry Wager Halleck, son of Joseph, Westernville, Oneida county, N. Y., and his father were in the Federal army. Henry's brother Andrew was on his staff. Henry served also in the Mexican war. He held the position of Lieut.-General (succeeding Maj. Gen. McClellan) from July 11, 1862, to March 12, 1864, when he was superseded by Gen. Grant. He was known in the army as Old Brains. He drafted the first constitution of the State of California.

Capt. Frederick M. Hallock and Capt. Franklin B. Hallock were in the Federal army.

Herbert T. Hallock of Clayton county, Iowa, had three sons who died in the army. Lieut. Charles C. of Brooklyn, son of William of Mattituck, was in the army.

Capt. Nathaniel Hallock Mann, Edward Hallock Ketcham, and John T. Ketcham, grandsons of James Hallock of Milton, N. Y., died in the army.

James Cooley Hallock, son of Amos of Washington Hollow, N. Y., was an officer in the U. S. army at Fort Armstrong, Rock Island, in 1832, and went up the Mississippi river in the first steamer that reached St. Paul. Wm. S. Hallock of St. Louis: Samuel H. and Henry S., sons of John Clark Hallock of Mt. Vernon, Iowa, all died in the civil war in the Federal army.

CHAPTER V.

MAYHEW GENEALOGY.

1. Thomas Mayhew, first governor of Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard.

2. His daughter Hannah m. Thomas Daggett (2).

3. Thomas Daggett m. Elizabeth Hawes.

4. Mercy Daggett m. Matthew Norton (3).

5. Desire Norton m. Robert Allen (5).

6. Desire Allen m. Athearn Butler (5).

Desire Allen married as her second husband Dea. Zachariah Mayhew, who was born on Martha's Vineyard, Aug. 8, 1757, and removed to Williamsburg, Mass., 1786. He died May 29, 1830. He was sixth in line from Gov. Thomas Mayhew. Desire Allen Butler was sixth from Gov. Mayhew. The male line ran out with Zachariah. Following is the lineage :

1. Gov. Thomas Mayhew.

2. Rev. Thomas Mayhew.

3. Rev. John Mayhew.

4. Rev. Experience Mayhew.

5. Rev. Zachariah Mayhew.

6. Dea. Zachariah Mayhew.

Rev. Zachariah, the last of the five (5) missionaries to the Indians, married Elizabeth Allen, daughter of Dea. John and Margaret Homes Allen.

Gov. Thomas Mayhew became a resident of Watertown, near Boston, in 1636. The following inscription is on a memorial stone erected by the citizens :

HERE BY THE ANCIENT FORD
THE LANDING AND THE WEIR WAS THE HOME STALL OF
THOMAS MAYHEW,
A LEADER IN WATERTOWN AFFAIRS
FROM 1635 TO 1645.
AFTERWARDS WITH HIS SON,
THE REV. THOMAS MAYHEW,
HE LABORED AMONG THE INDIANS
AT MARTHA'S VINEYARD.

He had been a merchant of Southampton, England, and was born in 1589. He died in Martha's Vineyard in 1681, in his 93d year. His first wife, Martha Parkhurst, died before coming to America. His second wife was Jane, widow of Thomas Paine. In 1641 he obtained a grant of Martha's Vineyard "and neighboring Islands," [see copy of deed] from Lord Sterling, becoming proprietor and governor, and carrying on a missionary work for five (5) generations, through his descendants, keeping several hundred Indians out of King Philip's war. About the same time he bought the island of Nantucket from the royal agent, Sir Ferdinand Gorges, the consideration being £30 and two beaver hats, "one for self (Mayhew) and another for wife," (which was more than the Dutch paid for the site of New York city.)

DEED MADE TO THOMAS MAYHEW BY RICHARD VINES FOR MARTHA'S VINEYARD.

(Deeds iii, 66, Secy's Office, Albany, N. Y.)

I, Richard Vines, of Saco, Gent. Steward Genttil for Sir Ferdinand Gorges, Knt., Lord Proprietor of the Province of Main Land and the islands of Caparrock and Nantican, do by these presents give full power and authority unto Thomas Mayhew, Gent. his heirs and associates, to plant and inhabit upon the islands of Caparrock and Martha's Vineyard, with all rights and privileges thereunto belonging, to enjoy the premises unto himself his heirs and associates forever, yielding and paying unto the said Sir Ferdinand Gorges his heirs and assigns forever annually, as two gentlemen indifferently by each of them chosen, shall judge to be meet by way of acknowledgement.

Given under my hand this 25th day of Oct., 1641.

Deed of Nantucket from Thomas Mayhew to 10 purchasers, on July 2, 1659, who are named in the instrument (deed iii, 56) as follows: Tristram Coffin, Thos. Macy, Christopher Hussey, Richard Swayne, Thos. Bernard, Peter Coffin, Stephen Greenleafe, John Swayne, and Wm. Pike, for consideration of "Thirty Pounds of Current Pay" and "two Beaver Hats, one for myself and one for my wife," retaining a 10th part of all lands and privileges for himself, and a choice of two necks of land.

¹DEED FROM JAMES FFORRESTT TO THOS. MAYHEW & SON.

(Deeds i, 17; iii, 64, and iii, 76, Sec'y's Office, Albany, N. Y.)

These presents do witness That I James Fforrestt, Gent, who was sent over into these parts of America by the Hon. Lord Sterling, with a commission of the ordering and disposing of all the islands lying between Cape Cod and Hudson's River . . . do hereunto grant unto Thomas Mayhew, at Watertown, Merchant, and to Thos. Mayhew, his son, free liberty to them, their heirs, and assigns, to plant and inhabit upon Nantucket and two small islands adjacent. . . . Provided, That Thomas Mayhew and Thos. Mayhew his son, or either of them or their assigns do render and pay yearly to the Hon. Lord Sterling, his heirs and assigns, such an acknowledgement as shall be thought fit by John Winthrop, Esq., the elder, or any two magistrates in Massachusetts Bay, being chosen for that end and purpose by the Hon. Lord Sterling or his Deputy; and by the said Thos. Mayhew and Thos. Mayhew his son, or their assigns.

It's agreed, That the government that the said Thomas Mayhew and Thos. Mayhew his son and their assigns shall set up, shall be such as is now established in the Massachusetts aforesaid, and that the said Thos. Mayhew, and Thos. Mayhew his son and their assigns shall have as much privilege touching their planting, inhabiting, and enjoying of all and every part of the premises as by the Patent to the Patentees of the Massachusetts aforesaid and their associates.

In witness hereof I the said James Fforrestt have hereunto set my hand and seal this 13th day of October, 1641.

In 1659 he sold the Vineyard to Tristram Coffin and others, reserving a tenth for himself, and a corporation was formed for agricultural purposes, not for religious objects, as has been stated, though the spiritual interests of the Indians were made the constant care of his four lineal successors until 1692, when Nantucket, Martha's Vineyard and all outlying islands, became a part of the State of Massachusetts. Grant and deed are on file at Albany, N. Y., because the islands were then dependencies of New York State.

The venerable Mayhew house stands on a commanding eminence overlooking the pleasant harbor of Edgartown, incorporated in 1671. The exact date of its erection is not known, but it must be two centuries old. That it stands on the same spot occupied by some earlier home of the family there can be no doubt, as three stone grave markers with initials, and a large boulder foreign to the locality, supposed to indicate the burial place of the venerable founder himself, are conspicuous on an adjoining lawn. It is of the colonial type, a two-story structure with four great square rooms to the front, facing east to the harbor. Large fireplaces are arranged around the great chimney in every room, but that of the kitchen or "living room," is simply immense—large enough to accommodate the family almost within its recesses. There are thirteen rooms in the old mansion, exclusive of numerous halls, cupboards, etc. Two generations of the ancient family have occupied a spacious residence beside it since it ceased to be the family mansion. It is still owned by them, however, and is readily rented during the summer season for the great beauty of its location. The grandfather of the present proprietor, who died about the year 1838, aged 92, remembered when a lad of twelve years to have helped his father at reshingling the roof, and in those early days when inferior material was not put into houses, it must at least have been standing thirty or forty years.

HALLOCK-MAYHEW ANCESTRY.

This lineage runs through ten generations, as follows :

1. Gov. Thomas Mayhew, of M. V.
2. Thomas Mayhew, Jr., an only son of the original grantee, born 1620, perished at sea in 1657, aged 37, the vessel on which he had taken passage to England never having been heard of.

3. John Mayhew, his oldest son, born in 1652, died Feb. 3, 1689, had brothers Matthew and Judge Thomas. Matthew succeeded his father as chief dignitary of the island, died Feb. 3, 1688, aged 37.

4. Experience Mayhew, born 1673, died Nov. 29, 1758, aged 85.

5. Zachariah Mayhew, born 1717, died 1806, aged 89: the youngest son.

6. Zachariah's only son, Zachariah Jr., was born 1757. Died in Williamsburg, Mass., May 29, 1830. He removed to Williamsburg in 1786. A brother of his, named Thomas, died some four years later. [Here the male line ran out.] His sister, Margaret Mayhew, born March, 1760, at Chilmark, Martha's Vineyard, married her cousin, Robert Allen, and had ten children, three sons and seven daughters.

7. One of the sons named Ezra, married Desire Norton. Ezra's sister, Margaret Allen, or Peggy, married Moses Hallock of Goshen, Mass., who moved with his parents, William and Alice Homes Hallock, from Southampton, L. I., where he was born in 1740.

8. Ezra Allen's only daughter, Eliza, born at Chilmark, Aug. 28, 1800, married her cousin, Gerard Hallock, son of Rev. Moses Hallock, born in Plainfield, Mass., March 18, 1800, who had sons, William Homes, Charles, Leavitt, and Gerard, and daughters, Eliza, Caroline Mayhew Butler, and Mary. Leavitt, buried Dec. 7, 1839, was the first interment in the old New Haven cemetery addition, lot 64, northwest corner.

9. William Homes, born at Chilmark, M. V., Aug. 26, 1826, married Julia Mack of Plainfield, Mass., Sept. 3, 1851, and had sons, William Gerard, and Gerard, and daughter, Laura Mack. His brother, Charles¹, born in New York city, March 13, 1834, had three sons:

10. Charles, Edmund Lee, and Livingston, born in 1856, 1860, and 1862, all of Brooklyn, N. Y. All died young. Charles was born in New Haven, Sept. 1, 1856, and died Feb. 22, 1869. The other two were born in Brooklyn.

CHAPTER VI.

THE ALDEN-ALLEN PEDIGREE.

(OF SAMUEL ALLEN 2d, OF DUNBURY, WHO MARRIED SARAH PARTRIDGE.)

The name Allen, same as Alan or Allan, is derived, according to Julian, from Aland, a wolf-hound; and Chaucer uses Aland in the same sense. Bailey derives it the same from the British. Camden thinks it a corruption from Alania, which signifies "sunbright." From the same we have Allen, Allin, Alleyne. In the Gaelic Alinna signifies exceedingly fair, handsome, elegant, lovely. Irish, Aline, fair, beautiful.

1. John Alden, born 1599, in 1623 married Priscilla Mullein.
2. Their son, Joseph Alden, born 1626, married Mary Simmons.
3. Isaac Alden, their son, born 1665, married Mehitabel Allen in 1685.

Mary Alden, daughter of Joseph and Mary Simmons Alden, born 1680, in 1700 married 3d Samuel Allen, born 1680.

4. Ebenezer, son of Isaac and Mehitabel Alden, born 1693, married Anna Keith in 1717.

5. John Alden.

6. Samuel Alden, born 1807, died May 28, 1903, at Duxbury, Mass., aged 95 years and 5 months.

Sarah Alden, daughter of Isaac and Mehitabel Alden, born 1636, married Seth Brett in 1713.

Matthew Allen, son of 3d Samuel Allen and Mary Alden, born 1708, married in 1736 Sarah Brett, daughter of Seth and Sarah Alden.

Susanna Alden, daughter of Ebenezer and Anna Keith, born 1719, married Ephraim Carey in 1738.

Ezra Allen, son of Matthew Allen and Sarah Brett, was born in 1739. In 1761 he married Phoebe Carey, daughter of Ephraim and Susanna Alden.

Thus Ezra Allen married the daughter of an Alden. His mother was the daughter of an Alden, and both of his grandmothers were Aldens. His great grandfather by his mother was an Alden, and his wife was the great granddaughter of his grandmother's brother. His mother was the granddaughter of his grandmother's brother. His father was first cousin to his wife's grandfather. His grandfather was brother to his wife's great grandmother, and his grandmother was sister to his wife's great grandfather.

THE ALLEN PEDIGREE ¹

1. Samuel Allen, born in England, came with the Massachusetts colony in 1630.
2. Samuel Allen 2d, born in Duxbury, Mass., 1632.
3. Samuel Allen 3d, born in East Bridgewater, Mass., 1660.
4. Matthew Allen, born in East Bridgewater, Mass., 1703.
5. Robert Allen, born in East Bridgewater, Mass., 1739.
6. Zenas Allen, born in East Bridgewater, Mass., 1763.
7. Ethan Allen, born in Tinmouth, Vermont, 1803.
8. George Allen, born in Chazy, N. Y., 1832.
9. Frank Allen, born in Freedom, Ill., 1855.

1. Samuel Allen, of Braintree, among the first settlers of Duxbury, came over with the Massachusetts colony in 1630. Anna, his first wife, died in 1641. Their children were :

1. Samuel, born 1632 in Duxbury, married in 1658 Sarah Partridge.
2. Joseph, born 1634, probably died young.
3. James, born 1636, married Elizabeth Perkins.
4. Sarah, born 1639, married Lieut. Josiah Standish, son of Miles.

¹ This is a line of pedigrees of Mrs. Juna J. Allen Lennon, of Bloomington, Ill.

5. Mary, born in 1641, married in 1655 Nathaniel Greenwood.
Ann Allen died, September, 1641.
Samuel Allen married for second wife, Margaret.
6. Abigail married in 1670 John Cory, son of John, of Somersetshire, Eng.
7. Joseph, born May 15, 1650, married Ruth Searles, Nov. 30, 1670.
Second wife Rebecca about 1681, died April 25, 1702.
Third wife, Lydia Holbrook, married June 27, 1704.
He died March 20, 1726.

Samuel Allen, of Braintree, Suffolk county, Mass. (Vol. of Wills, etc., 1667-83) has the following record: "To my son, James Allen. To my son-in-law, Josiah Standish, who married Sarah Allen, a son of Miles Standish," etc.

This James Allen, born in 1636, came to Martha's Vineyard with Josiah Standish and William Pabody in 1668-9, and bought land from the syndicate. He was the ancestor of all the Allens of the Vineyard, the first of the name on the island. He married Elizabeth Perkins, who died July 25, 1714, aged 78 years. Had 11 children. John, his son, married Margaret Homes, March 1, 1716, and died Oct. 17, 1767. She was born Sept. 28, 1696, and died April 26, 1778, aged 82. Had 12 or 13 children. One, Robert, born July 20, 1732, married Desire Norton on Dec. 21, 1752. For a second wife he had Mary Tilton, Nov. 21, 1792, who died June 10, 1801. He had 10 children by the first marriage.

1. Huldah, born Oct. 29, 1755, at Chilmark, died Nov. 8, 1826, married Sept. 9, 1775, Capt. J. Coffin, Edgartown.
2. Ezra, born July 5, 1755, died March 30, 1833, married April 6, 1797, Beulah Coffin, of Edgartown.
3. Mary, born Feb. 3, 1758, died April 5, 1802, married Rev. Joseph Thaxter, of Hingham, born May 4, 1742, died July 18, 1829.
4. Margaret, born March 22, 1760, died Dec. 29, 1831, married Sept. 12, 1792, Rev. Moses Hallock, born Feb. 16, 1760, died July 17, 1837.

THE JAMES ALLEN PEDIGREE.

1. James Allen, born 1762, at Chilmark, M. V., married Louisa Allen, daughter of Robert of the same place; not his own cousin. He was a very large man, of herculean strength, and weighed 300 pounds.

2. James Allen Jr., born at Chilmark, 1783, married Cynthia Cottle at same place, died Zanesville, O., 1847. All came to Zanesville in 1815, and all are buried there. Their children were:

1. Leander, born at Chilmark, M. V., 1804, married Mary A. Barton of Ohio, died April, 1882.

2. Lois, born Chilmark, 1806, married ——— Smith.

3. John C. Allen, born Jan. 27, 1809, at Chilmark, married Nancy Kirtland of Maumee, O., died Feb., 1895, aged 84.

4. James B. Allen, born Muskingum; moved to Illinois in 1859. In 1861, enlisted in the infantry; was fatally wounded at Shiloh, 1862. Married Margaret Dawson, who died after he did. James Allen was one of the family of ten, and a brother of Ezra Allen. Leander Allen and his sons who were old enough enlisted in 1861, and John C. had a son, James, who was in the war. William, a brother of J. A., Sen., was a judge at Portland, Me.

5. George C. Allen, of Estherville, Iowa, son of John C. Allen. Edgar W. Allen, son of Leander, of Zanesville.

A number of Allens came first to New Haven, not with the Massachusetts colony, and are therefore possibly of different antecedents and extraction. From New Haven they gradually moved up through the Connecticut valley as far as West Springfield, a part of which is now the city of Holyoke, and in due course met up with the Allens who had moved to Northampton from Martha's Vineyard. Migrations took place at various times from the Island. One very early migration occurred in 1657, when one Samuel Allen, a single man, came with his sister Sarah to Northampton, where he was married to Hannah Woodford in 1658, as shown by the parish register of the Edwards church. Their son, Samuel Jr., was deacon in that church in 1727. His son Thomas died in 1754. A nephew of Samuel, Joseph Allen, was great grandfather to Judge William Allen, of Portland, Maine. Other Allens mentioned in Rev. Soloman Clark's "Historical Catalogue of Northampton First Church," are Thomas Allen, grad. Harvard 1762, and first minister at Pittsfield; Moses Allen, grad. Princeton 1772, who went to Virginia and South Carolina; Major Solomon Allen, who served in the Revolutionary war, entered the ministry in 1801, at the age of 50, and organized four churches in Western New York; Phinehas Allen, father of Rev. Sam Allen and Phinehas Jr., of Pittsfield, Nehemiah Allen, Joseph Allen, Ethan Allen, William Allen and Elijah Allen of Roberts Meadow, who married Louisa Clark of Westhampton in 1849.

There are many Allens scattered throughout the Connecticut towns who are in no way connected with the early settlers who came to Northampton. Lots of them are crossed with the Smiths and Ives. One William Ives, who was born in 1607, came from England to Boston in ship "Truelove" about 1635. He was one of the original settlers of Quinnipiac, or New Haven. His son, Capt. Joseph Ives, married Mary Yale, daughter of Thomas Yale, who was father of Elihu Yale, founder of Yale College.

The most famous of these Allens was Gen. Ethan Allen, who demanded the surrender of Fort Ticonderoga "in the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress, by God!" and the next was Amos Allen, who was with Gen. Ethan at the time, and also in the French and Indian wars; was captured and taken to Canada, where he was sentenced to "run the gantlet." How he escaped almost certain death by this ordeal is related by his living relative, Howard B. Allen, of Newton, Mass., whose father, Hiram B. Allen, used to sit on the old soldier's knee and heard him tell the story, receiving it in turn from him. "To run the gantlet," he said, "means sure death. The Indians range themselves in two files, facing each other. First came the warriors, then the braves, then the bucks, or young men who have not been to war, then the women and children, each armed with clubs, tomahawks, knives, etc., striking the prisoner anywhere or way they can. Amos knew this. He, being very swift of foot and very spry, started away back from the head of the file to run. Just as he got to the head of the file he stopped suddenly, seized the club of the first warrior, then running down the file swinging the club around his head; whereupon the Indians fell back to escape the club; thus he got through safely. For such bravery they spared his life and gave him liberty about the camp, but must return every night. They put so much confidence in him that he soon escaped."

5. This Amos Allen was born Sept. 15, 1734, married Dinah Bishop of New Haven Dec. 11, 1760, born Oct. 7, 1739, died Oct. 11, 1829, aged 90. He died Jan. 26, 1818; had son

6. Bishop Allen, born North Haven, Conn., May 15, 1766, died in Holyoke, Mass., April 22, 1845. Married Polly Ann Smith Dec. 24, 1786, born March 8, 1767; had son

7. Lysander Allen, born West Springfield, Mass., Feb. 12, 1791, died July 17, 1855, married Eleanor Hull Ives of West Springfield Dec. 14, 1814, who was born Oct. 30, 1795, died Dec. 1, 1863; had son

8. Merwin Allen, born June 10, 1825, married Lucy Ann Smith Nov. 11, 1847, who was born at Northampton, Mass., Sept. 3, 1830, and died Dec. 12, 1863. Had son

9. Hervey L. Allen, born Aug. 11, 1859, now living at Princess Bay, N. Y., and has children.

Many valuable records of this Allen family were burned at North Haven, Conn., during the war of 1812, so that the cue between the earliest settlers and intermediate descendants has been lost.

THE SCOTCH ALLENS.

A third group of Allens seems to be of Scottish origin, and to have descended from the ten sons and three daughters of a notable Scot and his wife, who came to America in 1630 and settled in the southeastern part of Massachusetts, near or in what is now Rhode Island. These facts and what follows have been contributed by George Allen, of Raleigh, N. C., aged 73, whose father, Rev. Darius Cushing Allen, married Eliza A. Slover of Newbern, and was a preacher for many years in the state of North Carolina in the early part of the century, and afterward moved to Ohio, near Columbus, and then to Lewistown, Ill., where he organized churches, and died in 1839 and was buried, his wife then returning to Newbern. The records show that these older settlers were men of godly character, occupied leading positions in the community, and a number were men of means.

Joseph Benjamin Allen was born about 1725, near Providence. He had three sons and one daughter.

From probably next generation four brothers, Benjamin, Joseph, Elisha and Hezekiah, were descended, all men of piety, and all lived to old age. The children of Benjamin Allen and his wife Mary were Abel, Darius and Benjamin; possibly others.

From Benjamin Allen, who was a merchant at Hudson, N. Y., are descended Rev. Benjamin Allen, Episcopal minister; Rev. Thomas G. Allen, both of Philadelphia, and the latter's grandson, Allen Childs, now living in Philadelphia.

From Darius Allen, who married Mary Brown, (whose ancestor, Charles Brown, with Obadiah Holmes, Roger Williams and others, purchased the land from the Indians and laid out Providence, and who gave the campus and a large sum of money to organize Brown university). Rev. Darius Cushing Allen and Jeremiah N. Allen were descended.

From Abel Allen was descended Henry Allen, and the Potters of Boston; Dr. W. H. Potter, dentist and Harvard professor, who married Mary, daughter of George Allen of Raleigh, thereby completing the circuit.

THE DAGGETT PEDIGREE.

John Daggett came from Groton, England, in the fleet with Winthrop, Oct. 19, 1630, and was in Watertown, Mass. He went to Martha's Vineyard with Thomas Mayhew in 1641. His first wife is not known. His second wife was the widow Bathsheba Pratt, of Plymouth, married Aug. 29, 1667.

2. Son Thomas, born about 1630 at Watertown, married about 1657 Hannah Mayhew, born at Edgartown April 15, 1635, died 1722. He died at Edgartown in 1691.

3. Son Thomas, born 1658 at Edgartown, died Aug. 25, 1726, married in 1685 Elizabeth Hawes, daughter of Edmund Hawes, of Yarmouth, who died Dec. 25, 1715.

CHAPTER X.

THE HOMES PEDIGREE.

William Homes, born in the north of Ireland in 1663, as per preface to his book on "Family Government," printed at Boston after his death in 1746. (though some say he was born in Scotland), came to America in 1686, and taught school for three years at Tisbury, afterward Chilmark. M. V., which island was then under New York jurisdiction. Returning then to Ireland he married Katherine, daughter of Rev. Robert Craighead, who had been a minister at Donoughmore. in Donegal, but was transferred to Derry in 1690, where he served until his death in 1711. In 1714 Rev. Homes came back to America in his 50th year and settled at Chilmark as pastor, where he died in 1746, at the age of 83. as per gravestone in the Chilmark cemetery. His wife Katherine died in 1754. aged 82. They had three sons and three daughters, viz.: Robert, Margaret, Jane, Hannah, John, and James. Robert married Mary Franklin, the youngest sister of Benjamin Franklin. Margaret married Dea. Benjamin Dagget, 1734. Jane married Sylvanus Allen.

[See Dagget and Allen pedigrees.]

James Allen, who was born in 1636, came to Martha's Vineyard with Josiah Standish, son of Capt. Miles Standish and William Pabody, in 1668-69. He was the ancestor of all the Allens of Martha's Vineyard. His son John Allen married Margaret Homes March 1, 1716, and died Oct. 17, 1767. She was born Sept. 20, 1696. and died April 26, 1778, aged 82. They had twelve or thirteen children. One of them, Robert Allen, had son Ezra, whose only daughter Eliza married her cousin. Gerard Hallock of the New York Journal of Commerce.

1. Wm. Homes of Ireland had son
2. Capt. Robert, born 1694, died 1727, who had son
3. William Homes, born 1717, died 1785, who had son
4. William Homes, born Boston 1742, died 1825.
5. Henry Homes, born Boston 1776, died 1845.
6. Henry A., born in Boston in March, 1812, and died at Albany, N. Y., Nov. 3, 1887. He was State Librarian for thirty years. Had son
7. Dr. Henry F. Homes of New York, born Constantinople April 20, 1847.

The following complete biographical sketch was prepared by Henry A. Homes for Rev. Dr. W. A. Hallock, D. D., of the American Tract Society, in 1863 :

“ William Homes first came to America in the year 1686, when he was twenty-two years old. There is no known record of the fact whether he came from Ireland at that time or from Scotland, though the former has usually been assumed. It was about the period of his first coming over that both Scotch and Scotch-Irish commenced emigrating to America to escape the persecution of the Stuarts and the Prelacy. On W. Homes' arrival he engaged as a teacher at Chilmark, then in Tisbury, Duke's county, which was then and continued to 1692, to be under the jurisdiction of the government of New York. At this time there were on the island about 3000 native Indians, of whom nearly one-half were Christians, converted under the labors of the Mayhews. Chilmark embraced the Cape of Gay Head, where to this day live the only remnant of the Indians. The English continued to employ him here as a teacher to their children for three years, when he returned again to Scotland, and pursued the course of study of the University of Edinburgh. He received the degree of Master of Arts from the University March 2, 1693.

“ He was ordained a clergyman Oct. 21, 1692, at Strabane, a borough town twelve miles southwest of Londonderry by the Presbytery of Convoy, and was a settled clergyman over the Presbyterian church there. He was often chosen Moderator of the Provincial Synod. While here, about 1688, he married Miss Katherine, daughter of Rev. Robert Craighead, who had been minister of Donoughmore, in Donegal, who was translated to Derry in the beginning of the year 1690, and continued there until his death, Aug. 22, 1711. Mr. Craighead was the author of books of piety and a religious controversy with Bishop King. After several years of service for the church in Strabane, Mr. Homes was settled in Raphoe, a town seven miles west of Strabane, and about eleven miles southwest of Derry. It is the seat of an Irish bishopric. In 1714 he came again to America and revisited Martha's Vineyard, at the age of 50. The people of Chilmark, incorporated as a town in 1714, remembered the young man who had previously taught among them with satisfaction, and invited him to become their pastor. Their only pastor previously was Ralph Thacher, who had been dismissed the same year with Mr. Homes' return. He discharged the duties of a pastor faithfully for thirty-one years, having a high repute for his piety and as a man of worth and learning. It is said that he used to fast twice a week. His salary was £60 a year. He took some care of a farm, but lived mostly on his salary.

"He was the author of five printed volumes, three of them published during his life, and the two after his death were on "Family Prayer" and on "Family Government," with a preface to the latter recommending them by Rev. Drs. Sewall and Prince of Boston. He preferred and recommended moderate Presbyterianism to the evils which he thought he saw in the Congregationalism by which he was surrounded. His name does not often appear on the records of New England ecclesiastical history for this reason, and also on account of his not being a graduate of Yale or Harvard, and his duties being discharged on a secluded island. The revered Experience Mayhew in his 'Account of the Indian Converts of Martha's Vineyard, 1727,' records that one of them, James Spaniard, who died in 1721, 'at divers times desired others to pray with him, particularly the Rev. Mr. William Homes.' He died in the year 1746, at the age of eighty-three. He was preaching in his pulpit and fell down suddenly in a fit, and gradually declined to his death. A marble stone in the graveyard of Chilmark marks his burial place. It bears the following inscription: 'In memory of the reverend, learned, eminently prudent, and pious Mr. William Homes, late pastor of the Church of Christ in Chilmark, who departed this life June 17, 1746, ae. 84.' Katherine his wife lies by his side. Died 1754, ae. 82.

"In the new church which I visited in 1828 was the identical pulpit in which he used to preach. I also conversed with the Widow Hilson, 100 years old, who had lived in his family and heard him preach. He was a man of such forbearance that while in his native land he used to be called "Wm. Homes the Meek," to distinguish him from another of the same name with himself. On his second arrival he had with him three sons and three daughters, viz.: Robert, Margaret, Jane, Hannah, John and James. Robert was the master of a sloop trading on our coast. He married Mary Franklin, Benjamin Franklin's youngest sister, in Boston, and was a member of the old North church in Boston. He is several times mentioned in Franklin's autobiography. His son William was my great-grandfather.

"Hannah was never married. She was remarkable as a peacemaker. The memory of the good works and alms deeds which she did is still fragrant among the people. A negro said he could not swear if he were sitting in her chair. E. P. remembers hearing Mrs. Butler, sister of Mr. W. A. Hallock's mother, say of Miss Hannah Homes, that when she took the Bible to read, all the children who were near would keep still, such was their reverence for her piety. She died at the house of one of the Allens in 1794, aged 90. The diary of Wm. Homes was in her custody until she came to live at Mr. Allen's in 1789. Margaret married Col. Jonathan Allen of Chilmark. They had children: Jane Homes married Sylvanus Allen. John died on the island, unmarried, about 32 years old, in 1732. In the graveyard at Chilmark is the following epitaph: 'In memory of Margaret (Homes) Allen, wife of Col. Jonathan Allen, who after a life of piety exchanged this world for immortality 1763. Ae. 67.' In a graveyard at Barnstable are inscriptions of the 'Homes Allens.' Holmes Hole received its appellation as early as 1644, and consequently has nothing to do with the memory of W. Homes. A portion of the diary of W. Homes is now in the archives of the Maine Historical Society. It extends in broken periods from 1688 to 1717. It embraces daily occurrences, including his religious experience. It covers 22 pages large letter paper, closely written in small hand.

CHAPTER XI.

ALLEN-BUTLER-HAWKS PEDIGREE.

1. Nicholas Butler, of Dorchester, Mass., came with his wife, Josie, and three children from Eastwell, Kent county, England. He removed to Martha's Vineyard in 1651.

2. His son John married Mary ———. He died July, 1658, having four sons, from whom are descended all the Butlers of the Vineyard.

3. His son John married Priscilla Norton.

4. John had son Samuel.

5. His son, Samuel 2d, born in Edgartown Dec. 25, 1727, died in Providence, R. I., June 29, 1814, aged 85; married Mary Athearn, born Sept. 16, 1731, died in Providence, Jan., 1819, aged 88. She was the daughter of Jethro and Mary Athearn.

6. Athearn Butler, born M. V. July 21, 1763, died May 6, 1814; married, Oct. 2, 1788, Desire Allen, born M. V. Nov. 7, 1767, died Jan. 13, 1843, at Williamsburg, to which place they had moved. They had seven children, Clarissa, Sophia, Desire, Cordelia, Mary, Ann, and Caroline. Clarissa, born July 24, 1789, died Nov. 3, 1814, was the first wife of

7. Calvin B. Hawks, son of Jared, born Charlemont March 19, 1784, and died in Shelburne Falls Jan. 24, 1874. They were married Feb. 26, 1811, and had children

8. (1) Athearn Butler, born March 30, 1815, moved to Americus Georgia, and died in that place Dec. 13, 1864, leaving a widow and three sons; (2) Elizabeth Fales, born Charlemont Feb. 12, 1817, died in Buckland June 6, 1850: married William Stearns Sept. 26, 1842. He died in 1845. A daughter born to them at Williamsburg, June 8, 1843, named Cynthia Cordelia, died in Northampton July 8, 1906. Clarissa's sister, Cordelia, was the second wife of Calvin B. Hawks; married Sept. 28, 1820. She was born Dec. 12, 1803, died Dec. 15, 1842. Had sons, Theron Holbrook and Sereno Dwight. Theron, born Charlemont Oct. 24, 1821, is now living in Springfield, in his 85th year. He married, June 5, 1855, Mary Oakes Hoadley, born New York city Nov. 17, 1830, daughter of David Hoadley, president of the American Exchange Bank, and later of the Panama railroad. Her mother was Mary Hotchkiss. They had sons

9. Winthrop Butler and Theron Holbrook, Jr., and daughters, Mary Hoadley, Elizabeth Sprague, and Eleanor Russell. Mary H., born May 12, 1856, married Oscar Howard Mitchell, who was born Oct. 4, 1851, and died March 29, 1889. Had children, Elizabeth S., born Oct. 15, 1859, single; Eleanor R., born Nov. 8, 1865; Theron S., born Nov. 10, 1883; Howard H., born Jan. 14, 1885, and Arthur Knox, born June 19, 1887. Eleanor married, Jan. 14, 1891, William G. Schaffer, M. D., and died Dec. 23, 1891, at Beirut, Syria, leaving son,

10. W. G. Schaffer, Jr., born Nov. 24, 1891.

Theron H., 2d., born Feb. 1, 1862, at Cleveland, O., married Florence L. Curtis, of Marietta, born Jan. 25, 1866: have children, Russell Curtis, born Sept. 14, 1889, died Aug. 10, 1890, at Duluth; Theron H. 3d., born Sept. 10, 1892, and Rollin Curtis, born May 2, 1895, both at Duluth. Rev. Theron's son, Winthrop Butler, born April 12, 1858, at West Springfield, died March 24, 1885, at Colorado Springs. Sophia married Benjamin White: she was born in Williamsburg May 6, 17—, died Jan. 24, 1874. Desire married Ira Atkins: she was born Oct. 22, 1799. Mary Ann, born Dec. 26, 1826, died 1867, married Erastus Bodman, son of Deacon Bodman, brother to Luther. [The Bodmans of Northampton and Chicago were sons of Luther of Williamsburg. As they are dead, his connection with the Allen-Butler line has left little or no influence.] Caroline married Rev. Wm. Adams, born Williamsburg Sept. 28, 1808, died Sept. 18, 1830.

All the Hawkeses (Hawkses) are direct descendants of the original John and Adam Hawks, and perhaps a third brother, who came over to America in the ship "Elizabeth," in 1634 from Ipswich, England, near the border of Wales, and landed in Boston. Adam located in Saugus, Mass., and John joined the Connecticut colony at Hartford or Windsor. From there John moved up the Connecticut river valley to Hadley, Mass., and was one of the original forty settlers on West street in 1659. He had sons Jared and Eleazar, who passed up into the Deerfield valley and located at Charlemont, where t'ey built a stockade around their houses on the crest of a knoll, erecting what is known to this day as "Hawks' Fort." Eleazer was the grandfather of William Hawks of Deerfield, whose son, William Jr., was father of Enos and William 3d. Enos married in 1866, and had daughter Alice, born July 21, 1872, and died Aug. 30, 1897, and sons Clarence E., now of Hadley, who is widely known as the "blind poet of New England," and author of several very popular nature study books and collections of poems; Enos, of Providence, R. I.; Ernest, of Denver, Col., and Arthur, of Gardner, Mass.

Rev. Theron H. Hawks, D. D., now in his 86th year, furnishes what follows regarding the early Deerfield settlement, which may not be new, but is interesting. The syncopated history herewith presented would be incomplete without it:

"I shall be glad to know where the first Eleazer appears in connection with the Hawks line. I placed him in the second generation as a son of the first John of Windsor and a brother of the second John, and as a distinguished leader in the migration from Hadley to Deerfield, having a son of the same name, and being a grandfather of a third of the name, all of whom were settlers in Deerfield: from the third of whom three sons settled in Charlemont, and later, one of these returned to Deerfield. A fourth of the name removed from Charlemont to Bennington, Vt., and a fifth was a brother of Calvin."

Rev. Roswell C. Hawks, son of Jared 2d, the son of Jared of Deerfield, and a younger brother of Calvin B., was a fellow-worker with Mary Lyon in founding Mt. Holyoke Female Seminary, and its president in 1851. He had four daughters and two sons: Edward was drowned in North Carolina ; Capt. Henry F., served in the civil war, and afterwards moved to Chicago, and then to Mexico, where he engaged in mining. Dr. William H., son of Philo Hawks of Charlemont, practiced in Washington, D. C., and died there March, 1904, aged 59, as a physician of note.

Robert Allen 2d, of M. V., was a brother of Margaret Allen, wife of Rev. Moses Hallock, of Plainfield, and brother of Ezra Allen of M. V., (whose daughter Eliza married Gerard Hallock, of New York) and also of Desire Allen, who married Athearn Butler, whose daughters Clarissa and Cordelia, were the two wives of Calvin B. Hawks, father of Rev. Theron Hawks. Desire Allen's father was Robert Allen 3d, born in Somerset, Vt., who married Amarett Sperry, born in Russell, Mass., where their daughter, Sarah A., married Edgar S. Sweatland.

(See Allen Pedigree.)

The 250th anniversary of the settlement of Adam Hawks in this country was celebrated at the original Hawks homestead in Saugus in the year 1880.

CHAPTER XII.

THE HALLOCK-HAYDEN LINEAGE.

6. William Hallock, Noah's son, born 1730, at Brookhaven, L. I., married Alice Homan of Chilmark, M. V., and moved to Goshen, Mass., in 1766; died Oct. 21, 1815; his wife in 1816: both buried in Goshen. They had nine children, of whom Jeremiah, Moses, Polly, Alice, and Bethiah were born at Brookhaven, and Abigail, Martha, Esther, and Mercy at Goshen. Goshen was settled in 1761. Esther married Rev. Josiah Hayden of Cummington, Mass., in March, 1793. She was born 1769, died Sept. 11, 1862, aged 93. Josiah had sons Josiah, Joel, Peter, and Cotton. JOEL was Lieut.-Governor of Massachusetts in 1863-5. He had four sons: Thomas, Frederic, who died in Switzerland, Joel, and Samuel, deceased; and four daughters: Jeanette, Anna, Isabella, and Ella, all of whom married persons of distinction. JOSIAH had seven sons: Josiah Bowen, William Hallock, Joseph Lewis, David Mason, George Wells, James Tibbals, and Charles Rowley. James T. lives in Chicago. He is the sole survivor of the seven. Josiah had two daughters: Miss Anna, who now occupies the Haydenville mansion, and Helen, who married Lucius C. Bailey of Buffalo. Of their two children, Hayden Gordon lives in England, is married, and has no children; Lillian married in 1881 George Henshal, the eminent musical composer; died in 1901, leaving one daughter, Helen, who is married and lives in London, Eng.

William Hallock Hayden had four sons, of whom two survive—William Hallock and Edward Parker. PETER died in New York city in the early 80's. He had sons William B. and Charles, living in New York, and Albert of Chicago; and daughters Flora, who married Arthur Boyd of Auburn, N. Y., and Kitty, single, also of Auburn.

The Haydens are descendants of John Hayden, of Cadhay House, of Ottery St. Mary, near Exeter, England, which was built in 1660 in the Elizabethan style, and still stands, near the old church of Ottery St. Mary, in whose crypts seventeen Haydens are buried. This church is a copy in miniature of the famous Exeter church. John was evidently its warden at one time, as the key still in use has his name stamped on it. One of the memorial tablets bears the effigy of a Crusader. In Hervor Castle, near by, now owned by an American, but once the home of Anna Boleyn, friend of Edward VIII, there is a quartering of the Hayden arms, with the armorial bearings of the Boleyns. This same John, who was a favorite with the King, came to America in 1630, and settled at Dorchester, Mass., where he was conspicuous as one of the founders of the Bay Colony. His posterity have not dishonored his name.

Benjamin, born Dec. 28, 1776, died Oct. 1, 1851, married Hephsebeth Coffin.

Dinah, born May 12, 1781, died Oct. 21, 1848.

Elizabeth, born Feb. 14, 1783, died June, 1862.

ANNOTATION.

WAS PETER HALLOCK A MYTH?

"Mrs. Elizabeth Hallock Corwin, great-granddaughter of Peter Hallock, who outlived her generation and died at 99, as by her gravestone in Old Aquebogue, was enamoured of her ancestry, and delighted to hand over the facts of their early settlement of Long Island to her descendants. She almost weekly visited the old homestead of her great-grandfather Peter, of her grandfather William, and her father Peter Jr. She said: 'My great-grandfather told his wife in England [see page 390] that if she would come over with him, her only son (Howell) should share with his own son (William), and so he did: the farm which he gave her son Howell laid right alongside of his own son's. When the ship came to the shore in Southold, the passengers did not dare to land for fear of the Indians, but Peter Hallock was a strong man and a bold man, and he stepped ashore first. So the place was called Hallock's Neck.'"—Hallock Ancestry, 1866.

Reading between these lines the inference is direct that Peter had already visited America at some previous date; that he came over alone, and had a farm located at Southold; that following his wife's consent to his proposition in equity, the return voyage was undertaken in some chance vessel that was up for America, and that he was put ashore at a point familiar to him, which has since been known as Hallock's Neck.

In a direct genealogical line from this witness, whose testimony seems to be "very straight goods," we have the following statement from her great-granddaughter, Mrs. Mary E. Benedict, whose father, Samuel Baldwin Corwin, was a son of Ezra Corwin, the third son of Silas Corwin and Elizabeth Hallock, who were married Jan. 13, 1753.

The husband was born in 1731 and died March 1, 1806; the wife in Sept., 1731, and died Feb. 12, 1831. They left nine children: Silas, Amlah, Ezra, Mary, Peter, Jabez, Elizabeth, Daniel, and Ebenezer. Mrs. Benedict goes on to say:

"My grandfather, Ezra Corwin, moved from Long Island to Orange county, New York, in 1800. He was given at that time a cane, which Peter Hallock handed down to the oldest son of each generation, with the instruction that their names should be marked on the cane. When given to Grandfather Corwin it passed out of the Hallock family, and had the following four names on it: Peter Hallock, Peter Hallock, Wm. Hallock, Wm. Hallock. With the cane was also to be handed down the association that he was the first white man to step foot on the east end of Long Island. That he came from England and landed on the east end of Long Island at a point he named Hallock's Neck. He bought land from the Indians and remained two years. At the end of two years he returned to England and remained twelve years, then he returned and landed at Southold in 1640, with a wife and one child. I calculate from the lapse of time that he landed in this country first in 1626.

"In 1809 my grandfather moved to what is now known as Blodgett's Mills, Cortland county, New York, with his family, my father being one year old. My father remained at home and cared for his parents until they died, and he came into possession of the homestead and also the cane. In 1847 father rented his two farms, and in June took his family to Wisconsin for a visit, and in the early part of the following winter the house on the small farm, which was back up on the hill, and where the most of our household goods were stored, was burned, and with it the cane which father valued so highly. He often used to say that he had intended to take it to Albany and place it in the care of the Historical Society. I learned from an uncle since my father's death that it had a gold head with a sperm whale's tooth on the top."

With regard to this relation of Mrs. Benedict, the Rev. Ephraim Whittaker, whose skepticism regarding the initial history of the Hallocks on Long Island is set forth in pp. 26 to 36 of his "History of Southold," published twenty-five years ago, has only to say that "legends above a century away from the transactions which they narrate have little value," and adds that he "would like to see a contemporary document giving proof of William Hallock's father ever having been in America," though he has "no hope of seeing any such document." Later on, writing from Southold, he says more decidedly:

“ There is not a particle of evidence to be found that Peter Hallock was ever here. The story of the ‘ thirteen men ’ coming together with the Rev. John Youngs, the Hallock landing, and the naming of Hallock’s Neck is untrue. The thirteen men of the story [whose names are given] included men of different generations. Some of them were scarcely born when others of them came here. It is perfectly certain that they never came together here.”

Now from Mrs. Benedict’s point of view, Rev. Whittaker is quite right about Peter not being one of a company of thirteen. Indeed, according to her testimony, he could not have been, for he came in 1626, and they not until 1640. He came as an adventurer, or argonaut, to investigate and invest, if there seemed to be a desirable opening, as Hampden did in Virginia about the same time. This was before the period of keen surveillance which distressed departing emigrants later on, when passenger lists were scrutinized and ships embargoed, as in the case of the “ Pilgrims ” and “ Puritans,” when whole parishes with their ministers would attempt to sail together. These sobriquets had not passed into current vogue when Peter Hallock, or Hol-yoke, made his first voyage, and he probably shipped as an individual and inconsequential voyager of the period. That he was a man of considerable means is shown by his son William’s tax bill in 1675, which is given as £361, equal to $1805, representing a large property for those fallow times. It may be questioned whether he was a Puritan at all, or a Pilgrim per se, although his posterity are mentioned as “ godly people, all well-to-do, going barefoot in summer, and eating with silver spoons.” All of which facts tally with the hypothesis of Hol-yoke antecedents and a gentle extraction. On his second voyage he came over in the same ship with Rev. Youngs’ New Haven colony, but not as a member of it. Anyhow, he very soon left for Long Island to look after his previous land investments, established himself on the “ old homestead ” beside the widow Howell lot, and—the rest is undisputed history.

For one, I consider these old “ legends,” as Rev. Whittaker is pleased to call them, the best of circumstantial evidence, especially when backed by heirlooms and inscriptions like those which Mrs. Benedict says were in evidence for more than two centuries, until less than fifty years ago ; and I have great respect for tradition as taught by the Hebrews, father to son, from the days of Moses until now, and as practiced by the Aborigines of America to this day.

Furthermore, I consider the frequent repetition of the name Peter throughout the earlier generations of the Hallock family as the strongest possible evidence that they had a noted ancestor of that name; as much so as respects the other name, which has passed from generation to generation, William. There is also special significance in the use of the cane as a pedigree stick or totem staff, employed by nations and tribes of all lands from time immemorial, especially in Alaska and our Northwest.

TO A FAR DISTANT FEMALE RELATIVE.

Thou art so near, and yet so far,
A brilliant of Creation !
Quite like yon distant shining star
In intimate relation :
For the wide space which lies between
May not obscure thy brightness,
Nor cosmic molecules serve, I ween,
T'impair the family likeness ?
So, like the astral Gemini,
In beaming constellation,
We'll praise Creator, you and I,
And joy in our relation.
